

A Lonely Life

Seth Bishop

Lately it seems, that maybe our dreams
Were never meant to be
Hating small things, talking to screams

What happened to you and me

We used to think that, this thing we have
Would last eternity

Whenever you call, you don't talk at all
It's not you, it's me

Open bottles of patron, I'm feeling alone
All along I should've known
This is how it has to be

Tryin day by day, just to rise above you
To let you move on, to some other guy
But I'm lying when I say, that I don't truly love you
Im livin, a lonely life

I hope he loves you, I hope he trusts you
I hope he longs for, nothing but you
I hope he gives you, what I never could

On my bed there's other girls perfume
She's got everything, but she's just not you

Tryin day by day, just to rise above you
To let you move on, to some other guy
But I'm lying when I say, that I don't truly love you
Im livin, a lonely life
