

Solace

Fuel

Draw the shades and close my eyes
(Never wanna see again)
i found the cost of courage high
(Sometimes hard to pay)
I hear the song the sirens sing
(Calling on the shore for me)
So sell your soul and try to fly
(The tether still remains) And all the finer things they laid upon my table
Smile as their hooks were slowly sinkin' in Another pill I'm to consume
(To make me learn to feel again)
Is followed by another one
(To make me lose the same)
God if I could recognize
(The things that make me whole again)
And draw this air into my lungs
(Remember how to breathe) For as the curtain rose I danced as I was able Felt my deception slowly sinkin' in
So I turn to you my love
(For the solace that is there)
The offer any cherished thing
(For a slight reprieve)
I hoped that you might find me here
(And I could learn to smile again)
And as a balm for these wounds
(Take away the sting) And as the band did play your body I did cradle
I should have known that song would have to end
Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <https://www.songlyrics.band/>