

Why Won't You

Brett Kissel

I heard you say what you said
When you said it's over
And the weight of the wave

Just pulled me under
I never saw me living without you
My life's come down to motions I go through

I see your face when I look in the mirror
I feel your breath all alone when I lay here
I reach out in the night because my
Heart believes you're still here with me
I hear your voice every time the phone rings
Like your shadow's walking right behind me
Try to run, try to hide, but I know your
Memory won't set me free
I can't keep living here like that
If everything keeps coming back
Then why won't you?
Why won't you?

I saw you leave when you left
But you never left me
Like the pain of these chains
That won't release me
I keep searching but I don't have a clue
How to go on living without you

I see your face when I look in the mirror
I feel your breath all alone when I lay here
I reach out in the night because my
Heart believes you're still here with me
I hear your voice every time the phone rings
Like your shadow's walking right behind me
Try to run, try to hide, but I know your
Memory won't set me free
I can't keep living here like that
If everything keeps coming back
Then why won't you?

I see your face when I look in the mirror
I feel your breath all alone when I lay here
I try to run, try to hide
But I love you desperately
I need you here with me
I can't keep living here like that
If everything keeps coming back
Then why won't you?

Why won't you?

I heard you say what you said
When you said it's over
And the weight of the wave
Just pulled me under
